CIRCULAR No. 2 of 2013
Dated: - 23.09.2013

Energy is the most vital input for the economic development and petroleum products constitute a major component of our energy consumption. The increasing demand for petroleum products due to economic growth has also generated concerns about its adverse impact on the environment as well as on our foreign exchange position due to our dependence (over 75%) on imported fuel for our needs.

While the consumers have to utilize petroleum products in different sectors, there exists considerable potential for conservation by making efforts at minimizing wastage of these precious resources. Consumers in the transport sector, agriculture sector as well as domestic consumers can adopt simple but effective conservation tips so as to reduce consumption of petroleum products which are enumerated below:-

1. Declaration of one day in the week as a "Bus Day" during which all may be encouraged to utilize only public transport for their daily commute.
2. Staggering of daily office timings to reduce consumption of petroleum products.
3. Development of efficient driving habits amongst the Drivers of STU (State Transport Undertaking) buses and fleet owners.
4. Improved maintenance practices by car and bus operators.
5. Proper operation and maintenance of tractors and diesel pumps in the agriculture sector.
6. Conservation of LPG at the household level through simple cooking tips.

It is, therefore, requested to kindly take some initiatives for generating promotion of petroleum conservation. In this respect various programs would be conducted in due course in which participation of your rank and file is solicited.
